

Read Psalm 63:1-8.

God,

There is none like You. You've created me to worship and I pray I'd kick off the things of the world I've put on the throne of my life and put You where you belong—high and lifted up. I really do desire to change, God. I believe that You have plans for my life, good ones. And that through the hardships I face, You really are working to form Christ within me.

Your Word says in order to become a true disciple and follow, I must give up everything for You (Luke 14:33). I know I can't choose both the "safe" route and living a life of reckless abandon while taking up my cross. So here I am, Lord, giving You my everything.

I pray that I would earnestly seek You, God. That I would meditate on You day and night. When I rise and when I lay down, I pray that You would be what I'm thinking about.

Thank You for your unconditional love. I'm so thankful it's not dependant on my attitude or actions. Your love is the same today as it was yesterday. Lord, help me to believe that Your will is best for me. Sometimes I think I know better. Please remind me that Your ways are higher than mine (Isaiah 55:8).

I love You, Lord. Thank You for loving me.

Yours,
Me
